Hi [REDACTED],

Thanks for the update. Just to say that neither myself or [REDACTED] received the Scotstat notice; it could just be that our systems are taking a while to push these things through, but I thought you might want to know in case you want to check if other users received it ok.

Do you plan to update the SG website and the PubHub with the information about the date change?

Best wishes,

Recorded Crime in Scotland, 2013-14 - publication date

Recorded Crime in Scotland 2013-14 was initially scheduled for publication in June 2014. However the publication date for these statistics has been reviewed and, as has happened in previous years, will now be published in the Autumn, to allow quality assurance, analysis and report writing to take place over the summer. This will ensure that the analysis and structure of the report reflect the new policing arrangements since the inception of Police Scotland and the report communicates the statistics in a way that is clear, accessible and helpful to all users.

We intend to publish the recorded crime statistics for 2013-14 in October 2014. We will provide an update to ScotStat users when the exact date of publication of the statistical bulletin has been confirmed.

Furthermore, users should note that Police Scotland has confirmed that it will publish detailed management information covering its performance in the first year, by June 25. This will give the Scottish Police Authority and the public a snapshot of crime in Scotland ahead of the publication of the National Statistics on recorded crime later this year.
